Issue No. 4

Summer 2009

Dear Fellow Knitters,

I just finished reading an article by Vicki Square in the summer issue of Interweave Knits and it made me smile ☺. First of all, I'm a huge fan of hers. She's the author of one of our most popular "how-to" books, The Knitter's Companion, a spiral-bound index card size book that we are quick to tell you fits easily into your knitting bag. It's a valuable reference when you're trying to decipher a new abbreviation or knitting technique.

So what made me smile? She advocates starting as many new projects as you can. Let's just say that's advice that I have no trouble following. While she doesn't suggest you pursue this with wreckless abandon, her point is to strategically select new projects that focus on your knitting interests and follow your creative juices. This got me thinking that I want to encourage all of you to play with your yarn this summer. Try a new stitch, play with color, experiment with a new fiber, knit something new to you. There's nothing more exciting than to "discover" how something new works!

This is a perfect segue onto another experiment we are trying. This Summer Newsletter is going to be posted on our website and is not being mailed through the post office. For those of you who have given us your e-mail addresses, we will e-mail you the link to our website for the newsletter. This is an effort to go green as well as to reduce administrative expenses.

Along these lines, we will also have more green recyclable Three Bags Full bags that we will be distributing. If you've already received one, please use it and kindly tell us so we can maximize our distribution of these bags.

The class offerings this summer are limited as we are gearing up for a fabulous fall chocked full of class offerings. We are trying to come up with some new class ideas and are interested in hearing your suggestions.

Inside this newsletter we have listed the schedule for our new Summer Sale of the Week. You'll be pleasantly surprised by what you'll find on sale.

I've already seen many of the new fall yarns! I leave this Friday to go to The National Needle Arts Market in Columbus, Ohio, where all the latest designs, fibers and accessories will be featured. It's always so exciting as I'm never let down with all the new inspirations. So practice and play this summer so you'll be in great shape to take on the newest challenges!

Happy Knitting,
Lynette
